OLD SILHOUETTE PRESENT TO TAFT

Paper Likeness of President Tyler Made by Artist Edouart in 1841.

JOHN TYLER.

Washington, June 28.—Mrs. E. Newell Jackson, related to President Tyler, has presented to President Taft the original silhouette portrait of President Tyler, made by the artist, Auguste Edouart, in Washington, in 1841. It will be placed in the White House collection of presidential portraits.

Mrs. Jackson has always been interested in silhouettes, the old black profile portraits of the eighteenth century. Six years ago she picked up a rare treatise on the art, written by Auguste Edouart, a Frenchman, who toured in Great Britain and the United States, and cut the picture in black paper of every king, queen, princess, president and senator in any town he visited.

Saved From Shipwreck.

When, in 1856, the artist took his passage home from the United States in the Onondaga, he had with him an enormous collection of silhouette portraits of famous American citizens, which he had cut from the original portraits of the French royal family taken at Holyrood, and a thousand of Americans—from Presidents Tyler, Harrison, John Quincy Adams and such men—Senators, doctors, ministers and bishops of the mid-nineteenth century in the first cities and pleasure resorts of the United States. Mrs. Jackson, in her research, found that she had run across this collection, and it was she who identified it, because she knew from old books that the collection existed, but never thought to find it.

She has examined many thousands of specimens of the work by the early silhouettists, when men and women painted the old shadow pictures on glass and ivory, porcelain and plaster. In the preparation of her "History of Silhouettes," which will shortly be published.

Made by Royal Cutters.

No written record yet exists of the many silhouette portraits of kings and queens, to say nothing of the pictures made by royal cutters, such as Princess Elizabeth, daughter of George III, whose work Mrs. Jackson had handled, and many of which are shown in her book.

Many people do not know of the three brooches, rings, lockets and old lace handkerchiefs, which were made by royal cutters, and which were mounted in gold and pearl and diamond. Mrs. Jackson possesses a round dozen of them, and she has a number of ette portraits, too. In rare and Queen Mary is among those who collected it, while Lady Saville, of Knola, and many others have also made their collection their hobby and have fine examples.

ACTION STARTED TO GET DIVORCE

Celebrated Case of Breckinridge vs. Breckinridge Will Be Called Friday.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] Clifton Forge, Va., June 28.—The celebrated case of Breckinridge vs. Breckinridge will be heard by Judge George K. Anderson in the City Circuit Court here Friday morning. This litigation is for the purpose of securing a divorce decree, and the promise of the parties adds to the interest of the coming proceedings. Several years ago Hunter Breckinridge and his wife, who were living in Pinckney, separated, and there was talk of a divorce. Through friends this was avoided, and the husband and wife were reconciled. About that time Clifton James P. Woods, of Roanoke, attorney for Mrs. Breckinridge, and Mr. Breckinridge had a personal duel at Pinckney, and the bullet from the pistol of the Roanoke attorney lodged in an innocent bystander.

Quite recently Mrs. Breckinridge took the two children out of the country, and was followed by Mr. Breckinridge as far as Paris, where he found the children on the streets, and brought them back home.

The litigation to be heard here is to determine upon a divorce and the possession of the children. The case promises to be of unusual interest.
